DETAILED ACTION

Inventorship

1. This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

Claim Objections

2. Claims 2, and 3 are objected to because of the following informalities:

In claim 2, line 2; the word "calculates" must be changed to --calculates--.

In claim 3, line 2; the word "calculates" must be changed to --calculates--. Appropriate correction is required.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

3. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

4. Claims 1-2, and 4 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Bryant et al (US 5,559,285).

Art Unit: 3747

Regarding claim 1, the reference of Bryant et al discloses the fuzzy logic method for detecting misfires in the engine including the following subject matters: a misfire detector of an internal combustion engine (70) utilizing a crankshaft (10) capable of rotating at different rotation periods (col. 3, lines 13-30), the detector comprising:

a map for storing misfire determination values as a basis for determining engine misfiring, each value associated with one of the rotation periods (col. 3, lines 31-53; col. 4, lines 11-23; and col. 6, line 35 through col. 7, line 38);

means for computing an engine speed fluctuation quantity, according to engine speed, for a predetermined period of time (col. 4, line 24 through col. 5, line 23); and means for detecting a misfire according to the stored misfire determination values and the calculated engine speed fluctuation quantity (col. 5, line 24 though col. 6, line 18).

Regarding claims 2, and 4, as rejected in claim 1.

Allowable Subject Matter

5. Claim 3 objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

6. Claims 5-11 are allowed. The prior art fails to disclose or render obvious the claimed combination including the steps of: means for detecting rotational fluctuation values of the engine; means for learning variation values of the rotational fluctuation values detected by the rotational fluctuation detecting means; means for determining from the variation values learned by the learning means and the rotational fluctuation value detected by the rotational fluctuation detecting means to determine whether the engine is misfiring; a random access memory (RAM) for storing the learned value; and a rewritable nonvolatile memory for storing the learned value, wherein the learned value stored in the RAM is rewritten every time the learning means computes a new learned value; and wherein the learned memory is rewritten only value stored in the on a predetermined nonvolatile condition.

Conclusion

7. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.

Frelund et al (US 6,598,589 B2), Bryant et al (US 5,794,171) and Vincent et al (US 5,735,246).
